Pumpenfabrik Wangen GmbH: Acquisition of KNOLL MX range

Pumpenfabrik Wangen GmbH acquires the KNOLL Progressing Cavity Pumps division

Wangen im Allgäu, January 2019

Pumpenfabrik Wangen GmbH will acquire the entire Hygienic Progressing Cavity Pumps (MX range) division of KNOLL Maschinenbau GmbH on 1 April 2019, further expanding its hygienic operations.

In recent years, Pumpenfabrik Wangen GmbH has successively optimised and expanded its hygienic pump range with the WANGEN HYLINER and the WANGEN Twin NG, in terms of progressing cavity pumps and twin screw pumps.

The MX range of pumps, which the company will now acquire, is an excellent fit and will enhance this business area. Knoll would like to focus increasingly on its core business in future and is pleased to have found a high-quality and experienced partner for its MX range.

The most stringent hygiene requirements and ease of service are the top priority with WANGEN products. The MX range offers appropriate comparable USPs when it comes to stability, pressure resistance and ease of service. Their modular design and robust construction make MX progressing cavity pumps ideal for use in the hygienic field, as well as in the chemical, paint, lacquer and paper industries. A key feature of the MX range is its EvenWall® technology version, which offers significantly higher pressure stability. They also provide uniquely high hygiene standards around the joints and seals.

The MX range will be handled in future through the entire Pumpenfabrik Wangen GmbH sales network as well as through existing KNOLL sales partners. Customers will also benefit from the extensive and growing Pumpenfabrik Wangen GmbH service network.

“We are adding the leading hygienic progressing cavity pump to our strong hygienic twin screw pump range, offering customers in future a considerably wider range from a single supplier,” explains Markus Hofheinz, Managing Director of Pumpenfabrik Wangen GmbH. The aim of both parties is to ensure the seamless transfer of
